ART SPARKS CREATIVITY

AT&T Hotel and Conference Center at The University of Texas at Austin

“Our conference center offers a variety of meeting rooms with ideal set-ups for engaging attendees.” said Alison Berg, director of sales and marketing. “Tiered classrooms are a unique setting for presentations and discussion, and the tiers allow attendees to collaborate effectively.

“All our meeting rooms feature complimentary Wi-Fi to help attendees stay connected. In addition to natural lighting, our new expansion features an incredible 4,000-square-foot mural by artist José Parlá that draws you into our 15,000-square-foot Zlotnik Family Ballroom. The mural is a grand piece of art that sparks conversation and creativity.”

From the moment attendees walk into the center, they are met with ways to get their networking and creative juices flowing. “Many of our conferences begin with a welcome reception before the keynotes and educational sessions start,” Berg said. “These social events allow attendees to mingle and get to know each other. We’ve also hosted chili cook-offs and chef showdowns for groups, which challenge their culinary talents and allow attendees to interact with our chefs. We especially enjoy hosting interactive opportunities to connect with our community. For example, one of our conference groups builds bikes and presents them to kids at the Boys & Girls Clubs and YMCA during their event.”

When the work day is over, the conference center has lots of fun options for enhancing the attendee experience. “A reception – especially in our courtyard or in our restaurant, The Carillon– is a fun activity after a long day of sessions,” Berg said. “Our chefs’ creativity in the food and drink options provides guests the opportunity to relax and unwind in style. Additionally, we partner with third-party companies to take attendees on unique Austin experiences or bring them on property. These range from bringing a longhorn to the property for photos or taking a bus to local music venues.”
